Handbook of Translocal Development and Global Mobilities

Edited by Annelies Zoomers, Maggi Leung, Kei Otsuki and Guus Van Westen, Utrecht University, the Netherlands

'This exceptionally rich and innovative text engages issues of translocal development and mobility through detailed, often empirically-based case studies. Its chapters expand on how meta-trend such as digitalization and environmental degradation affect development, and advocate for a mobilities perspective in analysing and addressing resulting issues. "Local" perspectives are highlighted to give guidance to policymakers on how to avoid the pitfalls and unintended consequences of previous approaches. It offers us a new way to think through the major issues of our time.'

Advanced Introduction to Mobilities

Mimi Sheller, Drexel University, US

'The "new mobilities paradigm" was announced 15 years ago. Here, one of the main figures in the development and phenomenal rise of mobilities work across the social sciences and humanities accounts for its progress since then, and shows why work on mobilities has never been more crucial for our understanding of the modern world. Linking low carbon transitions to social justice, tourism to migration, and the present to possible futures, there is no better summary of the state of the art than this.'

Rethinking Cultural Tourism

Greg Richards, Breda University of Applied Sciences and Tilburg University, the Netherlands

'Professor Greg Richards is the influential founder of the field of cultural tourism studies and his latest book builds on his 30 years of research and experience, as well as offering fresh and thought-provoking insights. In addition to a comprehensive and reflective synthesis of previous works on the subject, the book explores new, dynamic and holistic models of cultural tourism practices that challenge existing approaches. The work has important implications for experience design, place-making and cultural tourism journey creation today and into the future.'

Big Data Applications in Geography and Planning

An Essential Companion

Edited by Mark Birkin and Graham Clarke, University of Leeds, UK, Jonathan Corcoran and Robert Stimson, University of Queensland and University of Melbourne, Australia

'This is a very timely book featuring a collection of contributions from some of the world's leading scholars working in the equivalent of social science's "Wild West" – the world of Big Data. This book is indeed an essential companion for anyone wishing to understand the breadth of opportunities and challenges presented by data which lie outside of the traditional official statistics disseminated by governments. It will provide inspiration for those willing to take themselves out of their comfort zone and a glimpse of what is possible.'

Handbook for Sustainable Tourism Practitioners

The Essential Toolbox

Edited by Anna Spenceley, independent consultant, IUCN WCPA Tourism and Protected Areas Specialist Group, Global Sustainable Tourism Council, Travelyst, University of Brighton, UK and University of Johannesburg, South Africa

'Written by world experts in their fields, it fills a gap in the market for sustainable tourism research that is helpful and practical. It is gratifying to read all these chapters from consultants and practice-oriented academics that I have admired for years, which allow us an insight into the experience they have gained over decades of working for some of the most influential international organisations, overseas development agencies, governments and protected areas.'

A Research Agenda for Place Branding

Edited by Dominic Medway, Gary Warnaby, Manchester Metropolitan University and John Byrom, University of Liverpool, UK

'Most key themes of interest to anyone involved in place branding research are covered in the governance, contexts and experiences sections, and along with the key grounding issues, the book contains some very insightful case studies. In the final chapter, Stephen Brown recognises that while place branding may have peaked, we now see more of a focus on destination demarketing. This book is therefore very timely. Since global tourism was devastated in 2020 and places seek to recover from the COVID-19 pandemic, a more considered research agenda as outlined in this book may lead to places being better managed with a focus more on sufficiency than growth, so we do not face a need for destination demarketing again.'

Advanced Introduction to Urban Transport Planning

Kevin J. Krizek, University of Colorado, Boulder and David A. King, Arizona State University, US

'What a great book! Krizek and King bring the discipline of transport planning up-to-date with a keen eye on cities of the future. A holistic overview is provided, underpinned by social justice and accessibility thinking, considering all modes of transport and the relationship with the built environment. This book should be mandatory reading for all transport planners, not just students. I hope that it will promote new and inspirational practices that improve our ways of living.'

Predatory Urbanism

The Metabolism of Megaprojects in Asia

Agatino Rizzo with Anindita Mandal, Luleå University of Technology, Sweden

'This book gives much needed attention to the violence of state-led megaprojects in Asia's contemporary cities. The challenges of "predatory urbanism" examined in Qatar, Malaysia, and India are not harbingers of change; they are the change.'

Frictions in Cosmopolitan Mobilities

The Ethics and Social Practices of Movement across Cultures

Rodanthi Tzanelli, University of Leeds, UK

'Following on from her previous work, Dr Tzanelli's book is a journey in complexities where she untangles before our eyes the many threads that constitute contemporary mobilities. Theoretically grounded, she uses the film The Joker as a guide to revisit our assumptions on society, politics and mobility, while shedding light on the irony of performing cosmopolitanism and calling for a pluriversal perspective on knowledge. This book is a challenge to monolithic and ready-made thinking but mostly a much-needed look, without complacency, at our time.'

Urban Planning, Management and Governance in Emerging Economies

Paradigm Shifts

Edited by Jan Fransen, Erasmus University Rotterdam, Meine Pieter van Dijk, Erasmus University Rotterdam and Maastricht School of Management and Jurian Edelenbos, Erasmus University Rotterdam, the Netherlands

'The authors argue that cities in emerging economies can increase their sustainable competitiveness by replacing their traditional system of urban planning and management with a modern system of urban governance.'

This is a must read for those interested to understand how cities in emerging economies can cope with societal dynamics.'

Global Production Networks and Rural Development

Southeast Asia as a Fruit Supplier to China

Edited by Bill Pritchard, University of Sydney, Australia

'This edited volume brings together a set of timely and much needed research contributions on the pattern, nature and dynamics of the exports of fresh fruit from Southeast Asian countries to China. A palette of detailed case studies jointly develop our understanding of the emerging regional organization of agricultural trade flows directed to the food market in China by revealing new and different forms of inter-firm relationships and regulatory measures compared to similar but well-researched production networks that connect the Global South to the Global North.'
